

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

NICHOLAS GEORGE,

Plaintiff,

v.

WILLIAM REHIEL, et. al.,

Defendants.

No. 2:10-cv-586-EL

UNITED STATES' AND INDIVIDUAL FEDERAL DEFENDANTS' UNOPPOSED MOTION FOR CLARIFICATION

The individual federal defendants hereby move for clarification of the Court's September 30, 2011 Order. Specifically, the individual federal defendants seek clarification: (1) that this Court's September 30 Order intended to deny the qualified immunity arguments raised; and (2) the basis for that denial. Similarly, the United States respectfully requests that the Court similarly clarify: (1) whether the Court's September 30, 2011 Order intended to deny the United States' motion to dismiss the FTCA claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction; and, if so, (2) the basis for that ruling. A memorandum of law has been filed in support of this motion.

Plaintiff does not oppose the individual defendants' motion for clarification.

Qualified immunity is intended to shield officials from the burdens of litigation as much as liability and damages. See Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 638 (1987). It thus provides “an immunity from suit rather than a mere defense to liability.” Mitchell v. Forsyth, 472 U.S. 511, 526 (1985). Accordingly, the Supreme Court has repeatedly stressed that qualified immunity defenses should be resolved at the earliest possible stage of litigation. See, e.g., Hunter v. Bryant, 502 U.S. 224 (1991) (per curiam); Anderson, 483 U.S. at 638 (1987); Mitchell, 472 U.S. at 524; Wright v. City of Philadelphia, 409 F.3d 595, 599 (3d Cir. 2005).

The Supreme Court has made clear that this Court must examine the existence and parameters of the right allegedly violated “in light of the specific context of the case, not as a broad general proposition.” Saucier v. Katz, 533 U.S. 194, 201 (2001); Ashcroft v. Al-Kidd, 131 S. Ct. 2074, 2084 (reversing 9th Circuit Court of Appeals and noting “we have repeatedly told courts . . . not to define clearly established law at a high level of generality”). Moreover, an individual defendant is liable only for his own actions, not the actions of others; therefore, “a plaintiff must plead and prove that each Government-official defendant, through the officials own individual actions, has violated the Constitution.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1948 (2009). Accordingly, and recognizing that both liability and qualified immunity are individual matters, the Third Circuit has stated that “in a multi-defendant case, the district court should analyze the specific conduct of each Defendant with respect to the constitutional right at issue.” Estate of Smith v. Marasco, 318 F.3d 497, 511 (3d Cir. 2003) (citation and quotation marks omitted) (emphasis added).

The Court’s September 30, 2011 Order does not contain any analysis of the allegations against the individual officers. Indeed, none of the officers is even mentioned, and their conduct is never discussed. Instead, the Court, in a single sentence, ruled that the amended complaint shows a “plausible” claim - presumably against all of the individual federal defendants and the United States collectively. The Court does not analyze whether the individual conduct of each federal officer violated a constitutional right, and it does not opine on whether the constitutional right at issue was clearly established at the time they acted.<sup>2</sup> See Pearson v. Callahan, 129 S.Ct. 808, 818 (2009); Curley v. Klem, 499 F.3d 199, 206-08 (3d Cir. 2007).

The denial of qualified immunity in a case like this one is a final decision, and is therefore immediately appealable. See Johnson v. Jones, 515 U.S. 304 (1995). Because the United States is a party to this litigation, the individual defendants would have 60 days to file a notice of appeal. Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(1)(B). Before filing any notice of appeal, the individual federal defendants therefore seek clarification of the Court’s order, which does not provide them with the Court’s reasoning in rejecting their qualified immunity claims. The Supreme Court and Third Circuit have stated that an individual analysis of each defendant’s responsibility for each alleged constitutional violation is required. The lack of an individualized analysis of the qualified immunity defense in this Court’s Order would make it more difficult for the court of appeals, as well as the parties, to evaluate the basis for this Court’s ruling in any appeal. Accordingly, the individual defendants are filing this motion to clarify: (1) that this Court’s September 30 Order intended to deny the qualified immunity arguments raised; and (2) the basis

<sup>2</sup> This is particularly significant in this matter, because the plaintiff here sues two groups of federal individual defendants, the three Transportation Security Administration officers who were involved in the airport screening and the two FBI task force members who later interviewed him. There is no allegation that the FBI task force members were involved in the initial decision to detain plaintiff. To the contrary, shortly after arriving, they said that he should be released.

for that denial. The individual federal defendants therefore respectfully move the Court to clarify its September 30, 2011 Order and to explain its decision with respect to the denial of qualified immunity.

The United States is also studying this Court's decision denying the motion to dismiss the Federal Tort Claims Act claims against the United States, and is considering whether to ask this Court to certify its decision for immediate appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b), should such an appeal be authorized by the Solicitor General. The United States respectfully requests that the Court similarly clarify: (1) whether the Court's September 30 Order intended to deny the United States' motion to dismiss the FTCA claims for lack of subject matter jurisdiction; and, if so, (2) the basis for that ruling.
